A SHORT HISTORY

Of the Tauranga Golf Club

Also referred to as the "Gate Pa Golf Course", Tauranga Golf Club is the senior golf club in the Bay of Plenty and its location at the Tauranga Racecourse Reserve only 10 minutes from the Tauranga CBD and central to a large residential community, is the Home Club for 1,000 golfers and a preferred playing venue for golfers in the wider Bay of Plenty and New Zealand. Tauranga Golf Club is also the home of the Bob Charles Tour Carrus Open, and every year the course challenges the best of New Zealand's professional and amateur golfing talent over 72 holes of championship strokeplay competition.

The Tauranga Golf Club was officially established at in 1904 at the coastal location of Sulphur Point and relocated to the Reserve in 1914. The general layout of the present course was designed by Auckland Golf Professional Fred Rutter. The Signature Hole is the 12th, which is a 123m Par 3. "The Knoll" is aptly named with an elevated green falling away sharply on three sides. Considered to be short by some and strenuous by others because of the undulating terrain, the Tauranga course is a well maintained, park like course with gently undulating, tree lined fairways and well manicured, medium to fast paced greens. A programme of converting fairways to warm season grasses is also earning Tauranga the reputation as having the best fairways in the region.

A number of Club members have represented New Zealand including the late Una Wickham, Mike Nicholson and more recently Eddie Burgess, Kevin Smith and Jared Pender.

The clubhouse was rebuilt in early 2001 and now provides a modern, superbly equipped facility for members and visitors and includes a superb open plan lounge with elevated, panoramic views across the course and Racecourse Reserve. The main lounge seats over 200 and is complimented by a high quality 7-day food and beverage service and superb meeting venues such as the Trophy Room and Boardroom.

The Club Pro Shop is a modern retail facility operated by Golf Fusion Limited (Jack and Jay Carter) and offers the services of three PGA Qualified Professionals to cater for all your golfing needs.
